EASTERN NEWS.

Jay Eye See Lowers the Record, Trotting a Mile in 2:10.

THE GREELY PARTY RECEIVED WITH HONORS

The Charges Against Judge Advocate General Swaim—News Notes from Various Eastern Points.

Providence, Aug 1.—Jay Eye See, at the Narragansett park track to-day, surpassed all previous performances, making a mile in [illegible], thus beating that of Maud S. Its previous record of [illegible] and the famous black [illegible] The crowd also witnessed the fast double [illegible] record of 2:09½, and that of Frank and mate of [illegible]

The first event, the trial of Jay Eye See, was promptly called at 3 o'clock. The horse was brought out and was soon hitched to a sulky. [illegible] Bithers took his place behind him, and the little [illegible] followed by a crowd of admirers, jogged to the [illegible] leading to the stretch. As the [illegible] stand caught a glimpse of the famous horse a shout of [illegible] swelled forth which was taken up by groups in other parts of the grounds. [illegible] the noble animal turned into the stretch and passed down in front of the judges' stand the applause rose in a deafening cheer. The circuit of the track was made at an easy gait. After one or two more turns Bithers signified his intention to go an easy mile to warm up. The horse was then taken back to the stable to be rubbed down.

THE GREAT EVENT

Soon after came the great event of the day and the greatest event in the history of the trotting turf. Jay Eye See came on the track, and as he swung into the stretch the judges announced that he would make an attempt to beat his record. [illegible] behind his own running horse was [illegible] limbering out as he was to go the mile with Jay Eye See to give the little flyer courage and force him to a faster gait if necessary. After jogging down the stretch once or twice Jay Eye See turned at the distant stand and came down [illegible] for the word. He was working magnificently and as [illegible] was shouted by Mr Windsor the gelding sped away around the turn with the runner about eight lengths behind. Never did a horse work more evenly than did Jay Eye See as he [illegible] around the turn, and it seemed as if he was a piece of machinery and not a thing with life, so perfect was his action. Up the [illegible] he went with the runner trailing four lengths behind, and as he sped into the straight [illegible] cut him loose. Faster and faster were his strides, and it was evident [illegible] meant to send him. At the half the watches registered 1:05 [illegible] 2:10 [illegible], and if he could hold his own for the last half he would accomplish an unprecedented feat.

A MAGNIFICENT FINISH

Around the upper turn it seemed as if he was flying fast as had been his gait on the backstretch, [illegible] forced up now to something terrific. On and on he went, without a suspicion of a break, passing the three-quarter post in 1:[illegible]. At this point the runner came up even with the trotter and now began the final struggle. Down he came without a [illegible], every stride trotting, in the momentous struggle against the fast flying seconds. Bithers had [illegible] his whip, and as the gallant flyer sped past to the stand and under the wire there was a [illegible] bustle and then an [illegible] the cry. He [illegible] was raised by those [illegible] the spectators who had timed him. A loud burst of applause greeted this announcement only to be followed by a still more enthusiastic demonstration as the board [illegible] round, with the record [illegible] Never on a race track has there been a scene of [illegible] excitement than followed the announcement. [illegible] hats, handkerchiefs and fans were waved [illegible] shouted themselves hoarse in the ring [illegible] of the American turf.

[illegible] Bithers came back to the stand with Jay Eye See [illegible] magnificent horseshoe of [illegible] was presented [illegible] while around him gathered groups of admirers [illegible]

THE SUCCESS OF PACIFIC COAST HORSES

[illegible] Aug 1.—Special.—[illegible] of the Saratoga races yesterday says: The [illegible] of the California bred horses [illegible] Bonnie [illegible] was a source of much [illegible] to a number of visitors from the Pacific coast. O'Donnell and His Lepers

New York, Aug 1.—[Special.]—A sensational story [illegible] of the arrival of [illegible] O'Donnell of California. The lepers are [illegible] and have not arrived. [illegible] programme [illegible] An interview [illegible] with O'Donnell [illegible] said [illegible] had discovered them four days before, living [illegible] in two stories underground in a [illegible] between Pacific street and Broadway, [illegible] It is thought that they had been hid [illegible] by the [illegible] Company. [illegible] Two had been in this country eight or nine years, and had probably [illegible] leprosy four or five years. Wo [illegible] had lived [illegible] Hong Kong, and had rarely been [illegible] and [illegible] came to California. He [illegible] also was from Hong Kong. He worked [illegible] as servant in a very respectable family in San Francisco, and had leprosy while he was there. The [illegible] is 31 years old. [illegible] the second [illegible] picture of a young woman who has leprosy so [illegible] That is a young woman of one of the [illegible] families in California. She is highly educated, and only 20 years old. The whole family [illegible] three daughters, two sons, the father [illegible] They live in a fine house in San Francisco and never go outside of it. I have been in the house, and am acquainted with the family. [illegible] contracted leprosy from Chinese servants employed in the house only two weeks. He cancel [illegible] of a beautiful and well educated English [illegible] with leprosy on a steamer which had arrived [illegible] San Francisco from Honolulu, where she had [illegible] it from Chinese. She was sent to the [illegible] despite the protestations of her [illegible] steamer that comes to San Francisco from the [illegible] islands and from China [illegible] with her [illegible] in ten cases of leprosy.

A Yellow Fever Scare

Washington, Aug 1.—The surgeon general of the marine hospital service yesterday received a telegram from Dr Hatch, secretary of the California board of health, dated Sacramento, as follows: Reliable information is received that a Spanish [illegible] troupe with baggage and personal effects were allowed to pass Nogales without inspection [illegible] although one of the troupe died a few [illegible] previous from yellow fever, which is assuming [illegible] epidemic form in Sonora.

The surgeon general immediately telegraphed the collector of customs at El Paso, Texas, for [illegible] and directed the employment of another [illegible] inspector if the present officer be found at fault in the case. To-day he received a telegram from the [illegible] as follows: J. King, [illegible] at Nogales, Arizona, reports that the Spanish [illegible] troupe were detained twenty-four hours, but there was no yellow fever among them. He emphatically states that no case of yellow fever has [illegible] by rail through Nogales this month. If any [illegible] is desired, a suitable [illegible] an effective [illegible] will be an easy [illegible] The collector advises [illegible] that there are reports which are made by alarmists.

Reunion of Army Chaplains

Ocean Grove, N J, Aug 1.—[illegible] of army chaplains, federal and confederate, together with members of sanitary and Christian commissions, [illegible] began here to-day. [illegible] The Christian commission [illegible] presided at the [illegible] In the afternoon [illegible] band [illegible] the veterans, 300 strong, marched to the auditorium, where 5000 persons greeted them with waving of hats and cheers. The vast assembly then joined in singing "America."

Mrs W. S. Walsh read "Chaplain's [illegible] Thousand Men," and after prayer Major General John C. [illegible] was chosen chairman.

Army reminiscences were a chief part of the exercises. George H Stuart exhibited several curiosities, among them a bone bible made from the bones of a dead soldier by a dying soldier. On it was the [illegible] "God Bless the Christian Commission."

The exercises ended by singing "Star Spangled Banner." A dispatch from General Grant stated he would be present to-morrow if possible. General Logan is also expected. The name of each was loudly cheered.

The Demand for Cholera Preventives

New York, Aug 1.—Special.—A prominent drug [illegible] said yesterday: There has been considerable demand for carbolic acid, and as nearly the entire manufacture is confined to Europe, it becomes somewhat scarce here and dear. The price has almost doubled since the cholera scare began. Oil of peppermint and opium have also increased in price. There has been and is considerable demand for [illegible] but it is premature to think of buying [illegible] just now. Considerable camphor is being [illegible] but there cannot be said to be an unusual demand, though the price has been increased somewhat. I think that after awhile the prices of all drugs we get from the Mediterranean will advance on account of the cholera.

Washington, Aug 1.—The acting secretary of the treasury has issued instructions to customs officers to declare all rags coming from European ports suspected of infection and prevent the landing of them unless clear proof is furnished that they are free from disease, and come from non-infected ports.

The Texas Fever Scare

Chicago, Aug 1.—Health Commissioner DeWolf declares that so far as the present state of things is concerned the danger from Texas fever is [illegible] "But," he remarked, "new arrivals of infected cattle may come at any time. Our information as to the extent of the district in which Texas fever struck the cattle are to be found is as yet very incomplete. I believe that the cattle which were sick or dead developed the disease on the way hither."

Death of a Wealthy Chinaman

New York, Aug 1.—Special.—A wealthy Chinese merchant, Pan Sehong, who arrived yesterday from [illegible] died to-day. He had been a sufferer from general debility for some time. He was going to [illegible] and was on his way to China to die. His friend Lee Lee Wa is a wealthy merchant and owns stores in Cuba, this city, California and China. He will give his countryman a fine burial in Evergreen cemetery.

Washington, Aug 1.—Decrease of the public debt during July was $3,993,289. Cash in treasury, [illegible]; gold certificates, $[illegible]; silver certificates, $120,[illegible]; certificates of deposit, [illegible]; refunding certificates, $374,150; legal tenders, $346,681,016; fractional currency, $6,7[illegible].

THE RELIEF SQUADRON

It Arrives at Portsmouth and is Enthusiastically Received

Portsmouth, Aug 1.—The Greely relief squadron arrived here early this evening. The Alliance [illegible] at 4 A. M. from Portland, [illegible] will render [illegible] salute to building a reception Saturday. [illegible] Secretary Chandler has since taken [illegible] and [illegible] 1 P. M. to-day for the naval reception in the harbor. The programme as arranged for Saturday will be substantially carried out. [illegible] arrives at noon with General Hazen and party. [illegible] Greely's [illegible] other is also here.

ARRIVAL OF THE FLEET

Portsmouth, Aug 1.—At about [illegible] this morning the United States steamer Alliance which had been stationed outside the harbor in expectancy of the arrival of the Arctic fleet, [illegible] and steaming out soon became aware of the arrival of the Greely Arctic relief expedition. The armament of the Alliance was brought into play and gun after gun thundered forth peals of welcome to which the captain of the Greely boats [illegible] doubtless in grateful recognition. Shortly the Alliance came within hailing distance of the approaching steamers and with her flag flying and whistles shrieking, hailed the Bear and the Thetis. Shortly after sunrise the Bear, the Thetis and the Alliance steamed up [illegible] the Isle of Shoals, where the first stage of the homeward voyage of the Greely relief expedition was finished [illegible] They came into harbor with yards squared and stacks pouring forth clouds of smoke fully twenty-four hours before they had been expected. There was little [illegible] the three vessels to denote the severe experience which two of them had passed through.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE RECEPTION

When it became known that the Arctic squadron had arrived outside the harbor the excitement on board the men of war at anchor was intense. Shortly after the welcome news of the safe arrival of the Greely [illegible] spread through the city and when the Bear and Thetis had arrived off New Castle Secretary Chandler despatched a steam launch to Commander Schley with orders that the Bear and the Thetis should remain in the offing until preparations for their reception could be completed.

The secretary of the navy then proceeded to the Tallapoosa and orders were given at once for the [illegible] of war vessels in the harbor to prepare for the reception of the Arctic heroes. All naval vessels were decorated with American flags at [illegible] At noon the press boat and the government tug [illegible] steamed down the river and came to anchor where a good view of the ceremonies might be obtained. As the [illegible] came down the river the men on board the old ship Constitution ran up the shrouds, lifted their hats and waved and shouted a cordial salute.

Other vessels in the lower harbor were decked in the gayest colors. The flagship Tennessee displayed the acting admiral's broad pennant on her mizzen mast and the Tallapoosa gave to the breeze the colors of the secretary of the navy. The ships [illegible] under way and steamed down the river. At [illegible] preparations for the reception of the Arctic fleet were completed.

THE CHARGES AGAINST SWAIM

What the General will be Accused of Before the Court of Inquiry

Washington, Aug 1.—Major Scott, judge advocate of the court martial appointed to try General Swaim, has prepared charges upon which that officer will be called to account. The charges are, first, conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman; second, neglect of duty. The specification under the first charge, after reviewing transactions between General Swaim and Banker Bateman, alleges first that the former accepted [illegible] a knowledge [illegible] deposit of $[illegible] which was [illegible] withdrawing all but [illegible] signed and transferred a written [illegible] the firm of Wright [illegible] knowingly and fraudulently [illegible] to compel Bateman [illegible] the $[illegible] back [illegible] [illegible] Swaim improperly [illegible] to a personal interview [illegible] Bateman [illegible]

POLITICAL NEWS AND GOSSIP

Jim Belford's Opinion of the Republican Ballot—Butler Will Go Too Fork—[illegible]

Washington, Aug 1.—[illegible] Blaine saying to be elected [illegible] Belford of Colorado [illegible] We will carry New York, West Virginia and Ohio.

What are your reasons for thinking that Cleveland will be defeated?

He is a political accident, nominated by alliance with political rings of New York, Albany and Brooklyn. He is identified with the [illegible] that have been trying to dominate this country for years, and the people will tolerate them no longer. We expect to defeat him because he is a free trader. A majority of the people of this country are in favor of protection. The thirty-eight states do not propose that two of them—New York and Ohio—shall furnish us with constant presidential candidates upon the theory that nobody can be elected without their consent. We will elect Blaine because [illegible] ideas as to what should be our foreign policy. I don't think that Cleveland has any ideas on any subject.

HENDRICKS AND OHIO

"The [illegible] continued Judge Belford, "[illegible] Hendricks [illegible] a copperhead of the [illegible] a man who resigned his pew in a church because the pastor preached a loyal sermon; who opposed the war at every step; who fought every amendment to the constitution; who declared in a speech in the senate that Lincoln should be driven out of the White house, with such as to a man like Logan, who fought nobly through the war and who is regarded on all sides as the greatest volunteer general of the war, is simply ridiculous."

How about the dudes and mugwumps?

"Political dudes like George William Curtis, who part their hair in the middle, dare not announce their resolution to support Hendricks. They are attempting to promote friendship among the people by proposing to vote for Cleveland and not for Hendricks. Now every intelligent man knows that one class of electors represent both president and vice president, and that when they vote for Cleveland they will also vote at the same time for Hendricks."

POLITICAL EUNUCHS

"Carl Schurz, instead of being a moral republican, is a captain of [illegible] always drew his sword for the side which he thought had the most provisions. I cannot recall the time that he ever gratuitously made a speech for or a voluntary contribution to his party. His tariff rates per night were exceedingly large. Such a herd of political eunuchs cannot resist the coming cyclone. It would be a good lesson to the people of this country if these bandit statesmen had the courage to announce [illegible] what they are individually, that is, members of the democratic party and nothing more. We are better off without them. It would be a good thing for the republican party if it was wholly rid of them."

What kind of a campaign is it going to be?

"We will have a spirited campaign, and [illegible] less enthusiasm for Blaine and Logan. They will certainly be elected. Their election is a fact as [illegible] that God loves virtue and hates eunuchs and hypocrites."

HISCOCK CONFIDENT OF NEW YORK

Washington, Aug 1.—[Special.]—Representative Hiscock of New York arrived here yesterday and held a consultation with Secretary McPherson of the republican committee. [illegible] In answer to an inquiry as to the political situation in New York, Hiscock said: "I have no hesitation whatever in saying that Blaine will certainly carry New York. I will not predict what the majority will be, but Blaine is going to have a majority of New York's vote next November."

"What does the independent movement [illegible] York amount to?"

"It amounts to nothing. It is not taking hold anywhere."

"Is the feeling against Cleveland growing?"

"It does. A [illegible] workingmen throughout the country are becoming afraid of the democratic party. They do not like its position on the tariff. They see that the democratic idea of the tariff is dangerous to their interests."

"What will the democrats in New York do with the [illegible]?"

"I don't think that they will fall into line. They love that they [illegible] Cleveland."

"Will Blaine be [illegible]?"

"Certainly. [illegible] carry almost everything."

War Apparently Inevitable Between the French and the Chinese

A GREAT PANIC PREVAILING AT FOO CHOW

Mutiny and Murder on a Schooner Bound for the West Indies—The Cholera in France—Old World Notes

London, Aug 1.—The Times' dispatch from Foo Chow says that China refused to pay the indemnity demanded by France, and that the time granted China by France to decide upon the matter has been prolonged beyond August 1. A secret edict has been issued ordering Chinese not to molest foreigners, French civilians and missionaries. However, it is asserted that the lives of foreigners are not safe. The English flagship is landing sailors to act in defense of foreigners in Foo Chow. The China Merchants' fleet has been sold to an American for [illegible] taels, which is nearly equivalent to $7,000,000. War to all appearances is imminent.

London, Aug 1.—A dispatch from Foo Chow to-day states that there is a great panic there and foreigners are arming for defense. Ladies are leaving and the French consul is preparing to go aboard the gunboat.

London, Aug 1.—Dispatches to-day from Foo Chow assert that the general impression in that city is that war between France and China is inevitable. Diplomats and foreigners are leaving the city.

MUTINY AND MURDER

The Captain of the Julia Baker Killed and the Vessel Seized by the Crew

Philadelphia, Aug 1.—A startling story that the crew of the schooner Julia Baker, from New York for Point a Pitre, had mutinied, killed Captain John Lewis and been selling the cargo in the West Indies, led the owners of the vessel, Warner & Merritt, to send the following dispatch by telegraph to-day:

To the Collector of Customs at Key West: We have reason to believe that Captain Lewis of the schooner Julia Baker has been murdered and that a person calling himself Lewis is an impostor. Kindly ascertain what has been going on, why the vessel deviated from her course, what has become of her cargo, and all particulars. [illegible] speedy [illegible] and an sharp investigation. Telegraph full particulars quickly. WARNER & MERRITT.

THE REPLY

Key West, Fla, Aug 1, 1884.

Warner & Merritt, Philadelphia: The master assigns no reason for deviating from his course. He has noted the protest claiming the [illegible] sprung and leaked. A survey has been held to-day. He recommended the discharge of the cargo. The original manifest was lost and the lumber washed overboard, a portion of the flour is missing. The master's statement is rambling and conflicting. SELLING THE CARGO

As is said, the Julia Baker has been cruising in West Indian waters, selling her cargo [illegible] at [illegible] below the market prices. Captain Lewis was about [illegible] years of age, rather tall and [illegible] and the description of the present commander is altogether different. Albert Merritt of the firm of Warner & Merritt expressed the opinion that a mutiny had occurred on board the schooner and that a fight took place in which Captain Lewis was killed, and that the crew, fearing they were under [illegible] disguised to [illegible] and escape.

Warner & Merritt later received a dispatch from their [illegible] at Key West, stating that the captain and four men of the schooner Julia Baker had been arrested.

THE BEWITCHED BLACKSMITH

The Singular Power of a Maine Man Recalled by a Former Townsman

New York Sun.

"I don't know what there may be in the [illegible] Hurst business," said a former resident of Gardiner, Maine, now in business in this city, "but I do know that John Downs of Auburn, Maine, possessed a power that is much more extraordinary than the Hurst girls', and there is no deception about the latter. Downs is known as the 'bewitched blacksmith.' When I left Maine fifteen years ago he had first become aware that the exercise of his power was involuntary, and he was in great distress of mind over its possible consequences, having just had a painful demonstration of what might occur from its presence. He was not a particularly strong man himself, but by touching others he seemed to endow them with extraordinary strength. This singular power he was able not only to confer on human beings, but he could infuse animals with it. I remember once seeing a team stalled in a road leading to Auburn. They were attached to a heavy load, and the forewheels of a wagon ran into a deep rut and the horses were unable to pull them out. The driver was about to remove a portion of his load, when Downs chanced to be driving by. He stopped and, telling the driver to leave the load as it was, alighted. He rubbed each horse on the head and neck, and almost instantly they became nervous and restless. Downs told the driver to start them up. He did so, and the horses hauled the load out of the rut with the greatest ease and went off at such a gait that the driver found difficulty in controlling them. Boys who were barely able to lift the heavy sledge hammers in Downs' blacksmith shop had only to receive the power from the bewitched blacksmith [illegible] to swing them with the ease of old Vulcan himself. This singular strength given to others would remain in force from ten minutes to half an hour, and in passing away left the subject weak and depressed and sometimes quite ill. For this reason Downs finally refused to make subjects of any one. He was possessed also of great neurotic power, and with this he furnished no end of amusement to his friends. Every day he had some one running round on the [illegible] errands or performing all sorts of odd monkey shines. On one occasion a stern, dignified and greatly feared clergyman of the place defied the blacksmith to place him under the influence of his alleged mystic spell. In five minutes' time Downs had [illegible] the clergyman to a [illegible] a long distance away for a clay pipe and five cents' worth of tobacco, with which he returned as meekly as the most obedient errand boy.

"Downs finally ceased exercising this power [illegible] and has not subjected any one to it for [illegible] Charles W[illegible]ward, a well known [illegible] of Auburn and a [illegible] of the bewitched blacksmith, the two having been in the army together, returned [illegible] from a long absence from town about that time. Downs went to his place of business to see him. He shook hands with him heartily and threw one arm about Woodward's neck. This was on Thursday afternoon. Soon after Downs went out Woodward began to sing and dance and manifest an exhilaration of spirits that astonished his associates. Although a man of steady and very regular habits, he did not go [illegible] all night Thursday night, and did not [illegible] appearance [illegible] late Friday [illegible] He boarded with a man named Edwin Blake. Blake thought that Woodward's singular [illegible] was [illegible] getting him home. [illegible] Woodward had been around town [illegible] things generally. When he returned [illegible] Blake got him to [illegible] a physician. People came [illegible] Woodward and he astounded many of them by telling numerous family and business secrets [illegible] had no possible means of [illegible] The physician said that Woodward was suffering from hysteria, and advised that he be rubbed with strong mustard water. Blake undertook the task. He had rubbed Woodward but a short time when he was seized with a strange nervous twitching, and contraction of the muscles. At the same time Woodward came to his senses. Blake took up the singing and dancing, and acted as Woodward had been doing for two days. Besides that, he seemed possessed of most wonderful strength, and it required four strong men to manage him. This was added the still more remarkable power of telling what the intentions of any one of his attendants were, and what he was thinking about, making it impossible for them to use strategic measures in dealing with him.

"It was not until Woodward was restored to his senses that it was known that Downs had been to see him. I was then at once believed that he had been under the strange influence of the bewitched blacksmith, and that this had been transmitted to Blake. Downs was at once sent for to see if he could not remove the spell he had inspired. He visited Blake at once and by rubbing him soon restored him to himself. For the first time in his life, so he said at the time, Downs himself felt the influence of the power, or whatever it might be called, as he [illegible] from Blake, and for several [illegible] he could [illegible] restrain himself with only the [illegible] of his will to the utmost. He [illegible] half [illegible] depressed and nervous [illegible] Woodward on Thursday and [illegible] able to account for it. There was no thought of mesmerism in his mind when he greeted Woodward on that day. He said that he [illegible] never shake hands or touch any one again if he could help it. I have never seen him since. I left there and I had him at [illegible] the bewitched blacksmith until the performance of the Georgia wonder called him to my mind."

The Newly Discovered Upheaval in the Aleutian Islands

The secretary of the treasury has received from Capt M. A. Healy of the United States revenue cutter Corwin, under date of Ounalashka, May 28, a [illegible] report of the Corwin's [illegible] to the [illegible] Island [illegible] latitude [illegible] north, longitude 168.21 west. This volcano, which is in a state of constant and intense action, was upheaved from the sea in the summer of 1882, but was not seen by any civilized [illegible] until September 27, 1883 [illegible] was discovered by Capt Anderson of the schooner Matthew Turner. A few days later it was also seen by Capt Hague of the steamer Dora. [illegible] landing upon it was made previous to that by the officers of the Corwin last spring.

Dr Yemans describes it as a hill grey in [illegible] shaped hill about 800 feet in height, from the sides and summit of which great volumes of vapor were arising. At a height of about two-thirds of the distance from the base to the apex of the cone there issued a very irregular series of large steam jets which [illegible] in a horizontal direction completely across the northwestern face of the hill. Around those steam jets were seen, upon nearer approach, deposits of sulphur of various hues which at a distance had looked like patches of vegetation. A landing was effected without difficulty upon a narrow spit connecting the new volcano with the old island of Bogosloff, and Dr Yemans and Lieut Cantwell undertook the ascent of the smoking cone. It was covered by a thin layer of ash formed into a crust, the [illegible] from which was not strong enough to sustain a man's weight, and at every step the climbers' feet crushed through it and they sank knee deep into a soft, almost impalpable dust, which rose in clouds and nearly suffocated them.

As the summit was neared the heat of the ashes became almost unbearable. A thermometer buried in them half way up the ascent marked 140 degrees, and in a crevice of the ramparts of the crater the mercury rapidly expanded and filled the tube when the bulb burst, and forty [illegible] towards the solder used in attaching the suspension ring to the instrument was fused. The temperature was estimated at 500 degrees Fahrenheit. On all sides of the cone were perforations through which the steam escaped with more or less energy and in some cases at regular intervals like the exhaust of a steam engine. The interior of the crater could not be [illegible] the clouds of smoke [illegible]

NEWS AND GOSSIP FROM SAN FRANCISCO

The Provisions of the Dingley Act Evidently Being Evaded—News Items from British Columbia—Pacific Coast Points

A Peculiar Malady

San Francisco, Aug 1.—A dispatch from Tehachapi, California, yesterday announced a peculiar malady as having broken out among the workmen on the new railroad bridge being constructed at the Needles. Those attacked would suddenly complain of dizziness and fall to the ground in a fit. Two of them died in a few hours. Those who survived were removed to the railroad hospital at Sacramento. The disease is attracting considerable attention. W. P. Kohn of Sacramento, who has just returned from there, says the stricken men, even those not yet dead, all looked like corpses. The malady was at first thought to be due to miasma caused by the sudden falling of the river, leaving soaked ground, from which poisonous exhalations arose under the boiling sun. One of the men when questioned as how he felt when first attacked, replied that he remembered nothing until he came to his senses on the train. The heat during the period was intense, the thermometer registering 115 in the shade.

"Stud Horse Poker" Prohibited

San Francisco, Aug 1.—[Special.]—There has long existed a doubt here as to whether that refined and genteel game of "stud horse poker" was within the view of the gambling laws as a game of chance, and like other gambling games prohibited. It has at last been decided that it is, and the mayor has signed an order prohibiting the game, and directing the police to carry the order into effect. It will now be necessary for the boys to play in the back yard.

The Loss of the Corsica

[Special.]—A commission is sitting in this city to investigate the causes of the loss of the ship Corsica which sailed from Portland three years ago and was wrecked on the passage. Mr Gibson of Portland is here to give testimony. He will sail for home to-morrow.

Suit against Mackay

[Special.]—Argument has been submitted in the United States circuit court in the case of the city and county of San Francisco against John W. Mackay to compel the latter to pay $16,[illegible] delinquent taxes on stocks for the year 1881.

Joseph Knott's Will to be Contested

[Special.]—As soon as certain interested parties return from the east suit will be begun in the courts to set aside the will of the late Joseph Knott, which bequeathed most of his estate to his wife. W. W. Knott is still in the city.

Hennessheim Held for Trial

E. J. Hennessheim, who with the aid of Louis Smith swindled H. D. Hughes, former warehouse-keeper at Portland, Or., out of a large sum of money, was today held for trial with bonds at $2000. His accomplice Smith is at Victoria, B. C.

The Pinta Sails for Alaska

Vallejo, Aug 1.—The United States steamer Pinta left the navy yard at 10 A. M. for Alaska and proceeded to sea. She will stop at Esquimault. In addition to seven officers and a crew of forty-two men she carries up from the Mare Island barracks a detail of twenty marines under Second Lieutenant George Barrett. The marine corps is to be landed as a guard at Sitka.

THE DINGLEY ACT.

The Law Evidently Being Evaded at San Francisco

San Francisco, Aug 1.—Special.—The effort to enforce the Dingley ship bill, as it affects the employment of seamen [illegible] boarding house masters, is [illegible] a great deal of trouble, and in several cases [illegible] been [illegible] In an interview to-day [illegible] J. D. Stevenson, shipping commissioner, said that [illegible] ships, three crews under the new law. These men shipped for Liverpool at the rate of $[illegible] a month [illegible] average rate of wages [illegible] require [illegible] This looked like a [illegible] [illegible] from [illegible]

SUPERB SINGLE TREES

Their Place in Human Annals—Leaves from a Frontiersman's Observations in the Far West.

The Aryan mind has an hereditary love and admiration for those stately and temple-like trees which tower above the forest, and as hardly a tribe of our forefathers lacked a sacred tree in the midst of its hedge-defended village, so hardly a town of peaceful New England to-day lacks its tree of local repute, its elm or maple, or oak dear to the hearts of its people.

The love for beautiful trees is more widely spread among men than the love for flowers. Last summer, on the Ogdensburg railroad from Portland, the writer noticed a grave business man raise the window when the train neared Sebago and gaze long at a fine single elm tree on the hill. To a companion he said: "I go over this road every week, but I never fail to look at that tree. It is the most shapely and the largest on this line, and I take a great deal of pride in it." Several years ago, while traveling in the west, the writer met a tall and grizzled prospector who had spent twenty years in lonely tramps through the Rockies. "And, stranger," he said, "the finest thing I ever saw was a pine tree on the head waters of the Rio Grande ten years ago. It was twice as tall as any other tree, and it made one feel good to see how grand it was. 'Tis about forty miles from any settlement, but some of these days I want ter take a tramp that way again."

Now, the writer has himself seen some remarkable and magnificent single trees as yet undescribed in any journal. They are trees of the far west, and their time for winning a place in art, literature and history has not yet fully come, though hunters, miners and pioneers know and love them.

The first to be described is in the county of Trinity, California, in the extreme northern part of the Coast range, within fifty miles of the Siskiyou ranges and fifty miles from the Pacific ocean. It is almost an unexplored region. Botanists and geologists sometimes enter it by the narrow horseback trail, but no wagon road crosses the county east and west. The population is chiefly in several fertile valleys near the heart of the county, but the southern and western third of the district is a wilderness. Once while riding over a mountain trail twenty miles west of Douglas City the writer found so many cattle trails that the proper choice was difficult to determine. While in this quandary a lean, long-haired old man, bearing a muzzle-loading Kentucky rifle, came in sight, of whom having made formal inquiry, the following notable reply was received:

"Jest ye ride up on that crumblin' water ledge an' keep on till ye see the crookedest tree that ever growed. Then ye take the right hand trail."

Half a mile further the crooked tree appeared. There was a seamed and broken rock looming up like the [illegible] prow of some Great [illegible] ship, and against the gray rock wall appeared the flattened, twisted, interwoven network of a scarlet tree trunk, crowned far above the rock by massive leaves of intense green. It was a Madrona, a beautiful tree with scarlet bark, glossy leaves and red berries, indigenous to the Pacific coast. A small tree growing at the base of the rock had evidently followed an open crevice, and almost filled it with branches until when it reached the top it gained strength to force off the shell of rock. In dozens of places the branches, crossing at all manners of angles, had grown quite together. Low at the base rich fresh tree sprouts appeared, and the nakedness of the long stilted espalier tree was soon to be hidden. Ordinarily the Madrona is not over eighteen inches in diameter, but this tree, had it been allowed to grow naturally in a single trunk, would have been twice the size.

In the mountainous portion of San Luis Obispo county, nearly at the head of a narrow little valley, seldom visited except by stock herders, a tall and symmetrical white oak stands the largest in the entire region. It is chiefly remarkable for its shape, being a compact and beautiful oval, some three times higher than it is thick. Most of the white oaks of that region are broad, low-spreading trees, except when they stand closely, and then they lack side branches. This one stands all alone and fairly towers above the other trees of every description. About it sweeps a broad open space of rolling plain, grassy and flower-like, and stands upon a little knoll. The trunk is an arrowy column without ridge, knot, scar, furrow or blemish of any sort; the branches rise like the curves of an antique vase. Neither withered leaf nor broken limb appears; it is in the prime of a superb existence. The writer estimated the height at seventy-five feet and the girth of the trunk two feet above ground at over thirty feet. The distance to the lower branches was about twenty-five feet.

In the heart of the northern Sierras, where mountains cluster about the twin and snow-clad peaks of Lassen, is a region of giant pines. There the Pinus Lambertiana, or sugar pine, the Pinus Torreya, or pitch pine, the superb and graceful Librocedrus decurrens, and many other trees of almost equal size may be found. In some places the loggers are at work in the fragrant woods, but for the most part the famous logging flumes have not yet entered this region. Here, far from any road, known only to a few hunters and sheep herders, an Indian family spend their summers living in a hollow pine, so large is the tree that the hollow appears to occupy only half of its circumference, and yet as one stands inside it is evident that the accommodation afforded is quite equal to that of an ordinary "hall bedroom." The writer foolishly neglected measurements, but the tree rises far above its companions, and is still hale and stout.

In the heart of the redwood covered coast land of ravines and crags, far up the picturesque Novo and Navarro rivers in Mendocino county, are many giant trees almost as worthy of fame as their taller but less beautiful cousins, the big trees of Calaveras. There used to stand on the Navarro headwaters a stately redwood eighteen feet in diameter, fully one hundred and twenty-five feet in height, around whose base, and growing from the same roots, forty or fifty lesser trees, any one of them larger than the average pine of the New England woods, grew in rank luxuriance. Sprouts a few inches in thickness and often ten or fifteen feet in height surround the whole clump, which thus presented the appearance of a vast pyramid of green, equal in arboraceous interest to the best banyan of the Indian forests or the stoutest baobab of Africa.

Messrs. Fleming Bros:

Sirs,—I take this opportunity of informing you of the benefits I have derived from Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills. I have for two years past been afflicted with a severe pain over the eyes, accompanied with a nervousness and sense of dizziness, a malady beyond the power and skill of our physicians to relieve and cure caused, as far as I myself could judge, by a diseased state of the liver and stomach. Some of the doctors tried bleeding, and various other remedies were tried, but all in vain, for the complicated disease still stuck fast. At last I procured a box of your valuable Liver Pills from a druggist here, and found after taking a portion of them that the disease and painful sensation over the eyes have almost entirely left me. I will close by advising all those afflicted as I have been, to procure the valuable medicine at once, and save much time and pain with little expense. With sincere gratitude and respect I remain, yours respectfully,

Geo. W. Russell, Toronto.

New York.

Mr and Mrs Williams, No. 246 Seventh street, testify that they have both been suffering with the liver complaint for about five years. During which time they have spent a large amount of money and tried many remedies, but to no purpose. Finally, hearing of Dr. McLane's Liver Pills prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, they purchased four boxes, which they took according to the directions accompanying each box, and now pronounce themselves perfectly cured of that distressing disease.

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 2, 1884.

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES.

A correspondent thinks no money should be used in a political campaign; or, at least, he pretends to think so. We suspect, however, that he is either totally indifferent, or in favor of the democratic party, which party has not the confidence of the people sufficiently to get either money or credit. If he believed earnestly in any political principle, he would be in favor of spreading the belief by all legitimate means. There never was a very earnest Christian who would object to the use of money in spreading the gospel. No; the man who says no money ought to be used either does not know, or does not care what he is talking about. He has read stories about corruption, and bribery, and that sort of thing, and he closes up his pocket and tries to flatter himself that he is a great reformer. Some such have pretended to be shocked at the open announcement from the republican headquarters which sets forth the need of money, but they are not shocked if they care to see effort put forth in order that the best in politics may prevail. No party has yet or ever will carry on a contest lasting four or five months without a liberal supply of money to defray the necessary and legitimate expenses. There have always been large voluntary contributions to the republican fund, and there will be this year. There are wealthy men in the party who would rather give thousands of dollars to enable the party to make a vigorous and thorough campaign than to see a defeat, and when the time comes around for the regular contest they not only talk but give freely. They do not expect poor men to give. There are some poor men who can make able and convincing speeches, and equally earnest men who cannot are willing to and do pay the expenses of such speakers. The most manly and influential campaigns have always been those in which good argument has been furnished, both on the stump and in reading matter; in which whatever a party had to put forth in proof that it was better for the country than another party was proclaimed throughout the length and breadth of the land, so that no voter would lack information calculated to guide him in the exercise of his greatest privilege. The democrats, and their allies, who call themselves independents, have undertaken to see what they can do in the way of influencing the people by caricature and vulgar ribaldry into voting to defeat the party in power, and one duty of the hour must be to show the world that political sentiment in the United States is not made in that way. This can never be done by a policy of silence and folded hands—never so long as the people of this country are divided into parties for the purpose of securing good and just government, upon such lines of policy as commend themselves to the judgment of the people. Speechmaking will for a long time continue to be an important part of a political campaign. It is not, as it used to be, almost the only way of arguing a question before the people, yet it continues to be most effective, especially to the people who have not brought themselves to the point of daily political reading. There are not a few voters who, though wholly unaffected by the word as it appears to the eye, are alive to its fullest meaning when they hear it spoken. One paper may fairly present from day to day, the views of the party it prefers to support, while another paper as regularly disputes and laboriously digs up "inconsistencies," and all the time the bulk of the voting public may jog along as indifferent to their supposed interests in the matter as Spinoza was indifferent to his solemn excommunication; but let the music of a campaign begin; let patriotic airs greet the ear, and eloquent voices appeal to the sense, and suddenly the scene changes to one of animation and general interest. It is a pity that more people do not read daily newspapers, but while waiting for them to come on in this respect, as they have been rapidly doing in the past forty years, we must give them the old music of the campaign, and pay for it, too; for ringing speeches to audiences remote from the great centers; for convincing documents, fresh from the hands of skillful editors; for the political gospel of Blaine and Logan, proclaimed in every possible way. This is what money is wanted for. If bad men have sometimes bought votes, so much the worse for the community where it was done. It is no argument against the use of money in a campaign. A party that does not fight to win, and pay its bills as it goes along, deserves to be defeated; and the fact that men are more ready to give money to the republican campaigners than to the democratic campaigners is pretty good evidence that at heart there is a more general and a more genuine faith in the republican party, as is natural, looking at the record of each party in the past. We do not believe in depending upon starving missionaries nor in leaving the remotest voter unenlightened as to the issues of the campaign.

THE BUTLER PUZZLE.

What will Butler do, seems to be a puzzle to him as well as to the newspapers and politicians. He has been nominated for president by two parties, the greenbackers and anti-monopolists, and they are becoming impatient and discontented at his delay in declaring whether he will run as their candidate. At the same time General Butler belongs to the democratic party. He was a delegate to its national convention, took part in its proceedings, and was an aspirant for its highest honor. If he was like other men he would feel under obligations to declare his intentions without unnecessary delay, instead of continuing to embarrass all those parties, and in the end more seriously compromise himself. But he recognizes no obligations of honor. He is a mere freebooter. He is in politics simply for his own sinister and selfish ends. He has made trouble for every party that has tolerated his presence. At the democratic convention in 1860 he persistently voted for Jeff Davis as a candidate for president. When the democratic party no longer afforded the means for his personal advancement he changed his politics, and entered congress as a republican, and was the cause of bringing that party into such disrepute in Massachusetts that the democrats were able to elect the governor of the state. After he was hopelessly defeated in two congressional districts, he tried three times to get the republican nomination for governor, and only gave it up when he found it a hopeless task. Then he left the republican party and began to cater to all the elements of discontent he could stir up, using every demagogical device he could invent, to win the support of the workingmen, inviting them to "pool their issues" for his personal advancement. He became a greenbacker, a prohibitionist and an anti-monopolist in turn, though a free liver himself, a monopolist and a servant of monopolies. Having failed to build up out of these incongruous elements a Butler party in his own state, he succeeded at last in gaining control of the democratic organization, and after two unsuccessful attempts he was at last elected governor of Massachusetts as the candidate of the united democracy and greenbackers with the help of republicans who were disgusted with their own party in congress. In his effort for re-election he was defeated, but the increase in his vote over that of the year before was so large that he regarded it as a partial victory, and evidently believed that by securing the nominations of the greenback and anti-monopoly parties, he would show such strength among the masses as to compel the democrats to nominate him. His failure at Chicago left him apparently at sea, not knowing what port to enter. Without a single honest principle he cares for no one but himself. The diverse and inconsistent positions he has occupied and continue to occupy are the estimate of the people whose support he invites. Like the "pious editor" in the Bigelow Papers, he believes "wutever trash 'll keep the people in blindness." This is his creed:

> In short I firmly du believe
> In Humbug generally,
> Fer it's a thing that I perceive
> To hev a solid vally;
> This heth my faithful shepherd ben,
> In pasturs sweet heth led me,
> An' this'll keep the people green
> To feed ez they hev fed me.

His great ambition is to be president of the United States, and because he knows a great many people are ignorant and green and easily humbugged he still hopes to attain that goal toward which all his scheming and crooked ways have been directed. But there are signs that he is losing his hold upon his supporters by his present dilatory course. The people who look to him for a leader are greatly impressed by his usual promptness and audacity. They naturally yield to the force of a dominating spirit. Like the gods "they delight in gods and thrust the weak aside." As our dispatches indicate, he may already have waited too long to be an inspiring candidate, and perhaps he will fall back in the presidential race this year, and in the meantime endeavor to secure a new objective point in his campaign. Among the various speculations regarding his plans is an interesting one put forth by the Philadelphia Ledger's New York correspondent to the effect that General Butler desires a new sphere for the exercise of his peculiar gifts, and "really has his eye on the mayoralty of New York, and that the singular, not to say inexplicable, friendship which exists between him and John Kelly is predicated upon a mutual desire, if not a mutual compact, to bring about that political phenomenon at some future time." The recent legislation at Albany has vastly increased the patronage and power attaching to the office of mayor of New York, by authorizing him to appoint, without the consent of the board of aldermen, the heads of most of the municipal departments. Directly or indirectly the mayor can, after the 1st of January next, make his wishes respected by a large majority of the city officials. Kelly might be supposed to wish the mayoralty himself, but his modesty disposes him to doubt his chances of election. He heads a compact body of voters, but they constitute a very small minority of the New York democracy. He stands for no idea, and excites no interest outside of Tammany hall. If he is to retain the official patronage upon which the existence of Tammany depends, he must manage to induct into the mayoralty of New York a demagogue of talents more varied than his own, and capable of arousing the enthusiasm of the masses. There are thousands of socialists, silver men, greenbackers and cranks of various shades and degrees, who at present are without a leader. Neither of the existing parties is entirely satisfactory to this motley mass of voters. What is required to interest them in practical politics is a man like Butler, who belongs or has belonged, in his day, to every party under the sun, and can adjust his principles in a brilliant and entertaining manner to the exigencies of the hour. Such a man might perhaps succeed in creating a new party in New York very much as Mahone created a new party in Virginia, and he "for" Kelly very much for the same reason that Mahone was "for Arthur" and is now for Blaine—for the sake of a reciprocity of favors. According to the Ledger's correspondent the persons who assert the Kelly-Butler alliance "are very near to the 'Boss,' if they are not his confidants; and among the public men who can see the drift of things in this direction is the present occupant of the office upon which the Essex statesman is reported to have his eye."

According to this correspondent he has already taken the preliminary steps to become a resident of New York. He has "hired an office in the new building of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, in Nassau street, which goes to show that he is going at least to qualify himself for the office by acquiring the requisite legal residence." The mayoralty of New York is not a new idea with General Butler. Twenty-one years ago he is said to have expressed a regret, in view of the turbulence of the New York democracy at that time, that he was not then mayor, "if only for a brief period, that he might 'teach the New York democracy how to be loyal.'" As mayor of New York city he would have a fine field for the exercise of his peculiar gifts, and be able to rally about him a larger number of powerful supporters than he has yet had. Whatever may be his plans, whether he runs for president or governor, or mayor, or for congress again, it is certain that they include himself. He is in politics for whatever office he may want, and the workingmen who look to him as their Moses to lead them to the promised land are simply his dupes, and will be used as his tools to promote the only object in which he takes any interest, and that object is himself. This is the only solution of the Butler puzzle we can offer now, unless we adopt the summary method of Artemus Ward—"call it a conundrum and give it up?"

It is gratifying to all friends of the temperance movement that it is able to make so respectable a man as Governor St. John the candidate of the prohibition party, and that there are some proofs of the justice of the claim that he may receive half a million votes. But the issue is really a state issue, and it is by no means certain that the prohibitionists represent the most practicable solution of it. It is a long step from prohibition in states to national prohibition and the repeal of all taxes on vices, against which the prohibitionist platform declares. It is much more probable that the manufacture and sale of spirits will be strictly regulated than that it will be prohibited. But the prohibitionists are as hostile to all regulation short of prohibition as they are to no regulation at all.

Mr. Belford of Colorado has fired off some opinions concerning the campaign and the prospects, which make up in force what they lack in moderation. Belford is a red-haired republican, and most red-haired republicans are very much in earnest, and sometimes in anger. When Belford thinks of Cleveland as a possible president, he is every whit as angry as a democrat in contemplation of Blaine. He cannot help it. When he is "fer" a man he is for him at all hours of the day and night, and when he is "agin" a man, he would not hesitate to run him off the roof of a seven-story house.

The prohibition convention held in Pittsburg a few days ago assembled in the same hall that witnessed the birth of the republican party as a national organization nearly thirty years ago. The free soil national convention of 1852, that nominated Hale and Julian, was also held in that hall.

The New York Sun is shining very hotly upon the Cleveland men. It will scorch the head off the ticket, at the rate it is going on.

Underground Reservoirs in Constantinople

Margaret P. James, in the Manhattan for July.

The magnificent and vast receptacles for water built underground and within the city of Constantinople have been so entirely neglected that nearly all have fallen into decay and oblivion. One only of these remains to be seen with the water in it, which is doubtless much lower than it was in ancient days. Yere Batan Serai, or "the subterranean palace" is its name, as the Turks call it, and it is said to be, without any exception, the noblest relic of Roman taste and industry. It resembles an immense subterranean lake, and occasionally is visited by the curious traveler. Many years ago it was rumored that a young Englishman lost his life here, by risking the attempt to explore its dim recesses alone. He and his little boat which disappeared from the sight of a few companions, and others equally interested in watching for him, never came back to the entrance. After that, for some time at least, no one was permitted to descend into Yere Batan Serai. Then, again, tourists were allowed to visit the waters in company with a guide, as they are at present. Those who are grateful for the privilege of seeing such a remarkable monument of old Constantinople should also think gratefully of one Gillius, who discovered this reservoir above three hundred years ago. It had remained unknown to the Turks since the capture of Constantinople, and was then in total darkness. Now some rays of light penetrate it through a break in the wall. A light boat or raft is used to take strangers about on the waters and torches are necessary to enable one to view the place satisfactorily.

A REMARKABLE WOMAN.

Sketch of Jane Grey Swisshelm.

Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette.

Mrs. Swisshelm came from Chicago, where she had passed the winter, a few weeks ago and went to her home in Swissvale, the scene of her childhood years ago. On Saturday [illegible] inst., she was taken ill with a complaint common in the summer season. Since then she has grown weaker each day until [illegible] which she was told her hour had come. She has retained her consciousness throughout; yesterday finished dictating a letter to the Commercial Gazette, on whose [illegible] she has held a position for a long time. Her daughter Zo and her son-in-law, M[illegible] have been with her, and she was under the medical care of Dr. McClelland.

Mrs. Swisshelm's life has been a stormy journey through the world, with more thorns than roses. She has fought for the right as she saw it as few men or few women would have done. Courageous, patient and steadfast, no difficulty was large enough to stop her, and her work has left its mark on the age in which she lived. Four years ago she published an autobiography under the title of "Half a Century." From between its covers the following passages concerning her life have been taken:

"I was born on the 6th of September, 1815, in Pittsburg, on the banks of the Monongahela river near its confluence with the Allegheny. My father was Thomas Cannon, and my mother Mary Scott. They were both Scotch-Irish and descended from the Scotch Reformers. On my mother's side were several men and women who signed the 'Solemn League and Covenant,' and defended it to the loss of livings, land and life. Her mother, Jane Grey, was of that family which aspired to royalty, and gave to England lost one day's queen."

In April, 1816, her father moved to Wilkinsburg. In 1821 he returned to the city, and lived on Sixth street, now Sixth avenue, opposite Trinity church. While living here Mrs. Swisshelm confesses to spending much time in looking for ghosts in Trinity church yard. It was at this time that Lafayette visited Pittsburg, and Mrs. Swisshelm was one of the school children drawn up to receive him. This is what she says: "When Lafayette came to where I stood he stopped again and laid his hand on my head, turned up my face and spoke to me. I was too happy to know what he said, and in all the years since that day that hand has lain on my brow as a consecration."

Her father died in 1823, leaving his family in straightened circumstances. Mrs. Swisshelm was put to learning lace work and painting on velvet. She remarks, "I reached the culminating glory of artist life when Judge Braden of Butler gave me a new, crisp five-dollar bill for a Goddess of Liberty." At the age of 12 years she was sent to a select school at Braddock, where she acted as teacher in return for her education. Among the girls while there she was known as "the wax doll." In April, 1830, she taught school in Wilkinsburg, and claims to be the first teacher in Wilkinsburg who handled children without beating them. In 1831 she joined the Covenanter church.

Mrs. Swisshelm's account of her first meeting with her husband, at a country frolic, is as follows: "The host came and asked permission to introduce a gentleman, saying, 'If you do not treat him well I will never forgive you.' There was no need of this caution, for she presented a man whose presence made me feel that I was a very little girl, and I should have been at home. He was over six feet, tall, well formed and strongly built, with black hair and eyes, a long face and heavy whiskers. He was handsomely dressed and his manner was that of a grave and reverend seignior. A Russian count in a New York dining room, then, when counts were few, could not have seemed more foreign than this man in that village parlor, less than two miles from the place of his birth. * * * I next saw him on horseback, and this man of giant strength, in full suit of black, riding a large spirited black horse, became my black knight."

On the 18th of November, 1836, they were married. He and his family were Methodists, she was a Covenanter. They lived at his mother's. Their married life was not happy, although in her account of this period she speaks of the intense love she bore for the man whom she married. In 1837 a traveling artist stopped in Wilkinsburg and painted some portraits with crude materials gathered from a wagon shop. Mrs. Swisshelm took up the art. She met with some success and felt that she had found her vocation. But she conscientiously neglected her household duties, and her conscience began to trouble her. She felt that housekeeping was woman's sphere, and after a hard struggle put away her brushes, crushed her divine gift, and "spent my best years and powers cooking cabbage."

In 1838, with her husband, she went to Louisville, and it was there that she formed her hatred of slavery. She says: "I promised the Lord then and there that my life, it should be my work to bring deliverance to the captive and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." When 24 years of age she rebelled against her husband for the first time, coming home against his wishes to see her mother on her death bed. One year later she took charge of the Butler seminary at the salary of $25 a month.

Her first public writing was a short letter published in the Louisville Journal. In 1842 she began to write stories in rhyme over the signature "Jennie Deans," for the Dollar Newspaper and Neal's Saturday Gazette, both of Philadelphia. At the same time she wrote abolition articles and essays on woman's right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness for the Pittsburg Spirit of Liberty. In 1840 her husband accused her of trifling about household management, and the quarrel grew so bitter that she left him, but was induced to return in three days.

Idaho.

Gen. Miles, commanding department of the Columbia, has ordered that Fort Lapwai, I. T., will hereafter be regarded as an outpost of Fort Walla Walla, W. The Daily Oregonian

W[illegible]NESDAY MORNING, AUGUST [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] of his greatest privilege. The democrats, and their allies, who call themselves independents, have undertaken to see what they can do in the way of influencing the people by caricature and vulgar ribaldry directed at the party in power, and one duty of the hour must be to show the world that political wisdom is not in the [illegible] to that way. This can never be done by a policy of [illegible] the people of this country are divided into parties for the purpose of securing good and just government [illegible] give money to the republican campaign [illegible] to the democratic campaign [illegible] and [illegible] both in the republican party, as is natural, bearing in the record of each party in the past. We do not believe in depending upon [illegible] for [illegible] the [illegible] of the campaign.

THE BUTLER PUZZLE.

[illegible] Butler does not [illegible] as well to the newspapers and politicians. He has been nominated for president by two parties, [illegible] and they are becoming impatient and [illegible] at his delay in declaring whether he will run as their candidate. At the same time General Butler belongs to the democratic party. He was a delegate to its national convention, took part in its proceedings, and was an aspirant for its highest honor. If he was like other men he would feel under obligations to declare his intentions without unnecessary delay, instead of [illegible] all these parties, and in the end most [illegible] himself. [illegible] He is a mere freebooter. He is in politics simply for his own aggrandizement and selfish ends. He has made trouble for every party that has tolerated his presence. At the democratic convention in 1860 he persistently voted for Jeff Davis as a candidate for president. When the democratic party no longer afforded the [illegible] for his [illegible] he [illegible] politics, and entered [illegible] as a republican, and was the cause of [illegible] that party [illegible] in Massachusetts [illegible] the democrats were able to [illegible] of the state. After he was [illegible] he [illegible] the republican nomination for governor [illegible] left the republican party and began to [illegible] the democrats [illegible] every conceivable device [illegible] this he [illegible] at last in getting control of the [illegible] organization, and after two unsuccessful attempts he was at last elected governor of Massachusetts as the candidate of the [illegible] and greenbackers with the help of [illegible] who were disgusted with [illegible] he was defeated, but the [illegible] that of the year before [illegible] regarded it as a partial victory, and [illegible] believed that by securing the [illegible] of the greenback and anti-monopoly [illegible] with [illegible] at Chicago [illegible] Without a single honest principle [illegible] but himself. The diverse and inconsistent positions he has occupied and con-

[illegible] of the people whose [illegible]

[illegible] of New York [illegible] Tammany [illegible] than his own, and capable of arousing the enthusiasm of the masses. There are thousands of [illegible] greenbackers and [illegible] Neither of the existing parties [illegible] What is required to interest [illegible]

[illegible] the only object in which he takes any interest, and that object is himself. This is the only solution of the Butler puzzle we can offer now, and so we adopt the customary [illegible] "Artemus Ward" [illegible] give it up.

It is gratifying to all friends of the [illegible] that [illegible] the democratic party [illegible] the prohibition [illegible] the most [illegible] Licensing and the repeal of all taxes on [illegible] against which the prohibitionist platform declares. It is much more probable that the manufacture and sale of spirits will be strictly regulated [illegible] will be prohibited. But the prohibition [illegible] hostile to all regulation short of prohibition [illegible] are to no regulation at all.

Mr. Belford of Colorado has [illegible] opinions concerning the campaign and the prospects, which make up in force what they lack in moderation. Belford is a [illegible] republican, and most [illegible] republicans are very much in earnest [illegible] When Belford [illegible] Cleveland [illegible] as a democratic [illegible] He cannot help it. When he [illegible] at all hours of the day and night, and when he [illegible]

The prohibition convention held at Pittsburg a few days ago assembled in the [illegible] hall that witnessed the birth of the republican party as a national organization nearly thirty years ago. The free soil national convention of 1852 that nominated Hale and Julian was also held in that hall.

CITY

A CHINAMAN KILLED.—Few people are aware of the burdensome duties attendant upon the coroner of Multnomah county. His jurisdiction as regards [illegible] miles is nearly every direction being a large [illegible]. Yesterday noon a Chinaman reeking with foam [illegible], especially the [illegible] into the [illegible] and with much unintelligible jabbering endeavored to convey the idea that he knew something of a dead man. The coroner summoned a jury [illegible] express wagons, put a pine box and the [illegible] into the first and packing himself with [illegible] into the second, all set out under the Mon[illegible] toward the land of the rising sun [illegible] East Portland they were accosted by an Oregonian reporter who was suffering from [illegible] as they say, "down in Vermont" and [illegible] thought a short ride would do him [illegible]. Being assured that they were going [illegible] two miles out the reporter clambered [illegible] the jury and succeeded in making himself [illegible] during the course of that ride than [illegible] had been before in his life. Among the jury [illegible] Stuart and Frank Thompson, and what with [illegible] stories and the numerous brilliant [illegible] inveterate punster Coroner Cooke the [illegible] came very near being a subject himself for [illegible] before the limits of East Portland were [illegible]. Here the Chinaman was asked, "How [illegible]" and after much thought he answered [illegible]. The dust now rolled up and enveloped [illegible] which stopped conversation, and the [illegible] plodded along in silence. There is an end [illegible] things earthly, and so there was to the dust [illegible] road, which many citizens who live in town [illegible] to be improved by the money they yearly [illegible] county road taxes. There might be roads [illegible] more cost and more stumps in the middle [illegible] more pitfalls at the sides and [illegible] The [illegible] cow path through a [illegible] than this one was but hardly. A [illegible] of road that was covered with rocks let [illegible] away and a [illegible] Six miles to [illegible] loomed up ahead. The two wagons drew [illegible] of each other and a conference was [illegible] which resulted in a perceptible lowering of a [illegible] certain suspicious looking bottle. Th[illegible] was again interviewed and after even [illegible] thought than before said: "Me think [illegible] hab [illegible]." The coroner declared he [illegible] stiff now even if he had to go to [illegible] for it. Frank Thompson thought they [illegible] the Chinaman in the front wagon [illegible] going any further than one. The above [illegible] bottle again passed around and the pro[illegible] moved on. At the farm of Wm. B. Steele [illegible] from East Portland the body [illegible] found. When engaged in [illegible] the very top [illegible] tree 210 feet high [illegible] had at [illegible] his body [illegible]. His comp[illegible] to [illegible] his injuries were fatal and he died in a few [illegible]. The jury returned a verdict in accordance [illegible] the above facts.

A CHAMPION BEAR FIGHTER.—I. C. Potter, [illegible] who is now sojourning at North Beach, had [illegible] with a bear a few days ago which [illegible] on record and entitles him to the title [illegible] champion bear fighter of the Northwest. Mr. [illegible] his camp on the beach a few days since [illegible] a place found he owns on the [illegible] just [illegible] spring which is near the cave and the [illegible] which is known to all who have visited [illegible]. He worked until noon and then [illegible] the shade of a fallen tree to eat a luncheon, [illegible] with his knife and fork he heard a noise [illegible] up saw a young bear which allured by [illegible] of the [illegible] had vaulted upon the log [illegible] of a chance of diet. Mr. Potter dropped [illegible] and grabbed the bear, which acted [illegible] and fought like a tiger, but his fur [illegible] good hold and Potter clung to him. In a [illegible] the beard something crashing through the [illegible], and the old bear appeared on the scene [illegible] jaws gleaming fangs and [illegible] fired [illegible]. But Potter's blood was up and he was bound [illegible] bear or die. He grasped his dinner fork [illegible] hand and the cub in the other and [illegible] his back to the tree yelled out [illegible] MacDuff. The bear approached and [illegible] the fork up to the hilt in its nose. Then it [illegible] its haunches and a regular rough and [illegible] for the cub ensued. Mr. Potter, who is [illegible] with a knife and fork, never used them in [illegible] lively a manner before. The bear clawed [illegible] jabbed it in the nose with the fork every [illegible] forth an angry [illegible] enough or a snarl [illegible] bear whose nose soon looked like a pepper [illegible]. Potter presented the appearance of an insane [illegible] scarecrow, his clothes hanging in tatters [illegible] blood flowing from numerous scratches, but [illegible] to the cub the tighter and plied his [illegible]. At length the bear with a snarl of [illegible] threw up the sponge and started off in search [illegible] bear doctor. Mr. Potter did not wait for [illegible] but made quick time for the beach [illegible] now has the cub chained up as a trophy [illegible] becomes occasionally but in other respects [illegible] bully and the pet of all the campers in [illegible]. It is safe to bet that the old bear was [illegible] of the cub. Had its mother come to the [illegible] Mr. Potter's remains would have strewn the [illegible] autumn leaves in Vallambrosa and the [illegible] dining off them would have picked her [illegible] with the fork.

WORK FOR THE STREET SUPERINTENDENT.—[illegible] attention of Street Superintendent Vaughn is [illegible] called to the condition of the crossing [illegible] intersection of Twelfth and Taylor streets [illegible] spanning the crossing near the gutter [illegible] leaving exposed a dangerous hole [illegible] [illegible] The place should be re[illegible] before a serious accident occurs. A [illegible] planks will put the crossing in good repair [illegible] superintendent's attention is likewise di[illegible] the present unsafe condition of the N[illegible] bridge. This bridge is claimed to be dang[illegible] notifying the public of that fact is [illegible]. But the bridge was left open and is on [illegible] traveled street. Yesterday a gentleman not [illegible] the notice drove on the bridge. The [illegible] on a broken plank and both legs [illegible] through. The driver was pitched out on his [illegible] stunned for a moment and the horse was [illegible] bruised and scratched. Fortunately the [illegible] no more serious consequences. Either [illegible] should be repaired and rendered safe or [illegible] should be barricaded to shut out travel.

[illegible] A NAME?—A dispute occurred between [illegible] the telegraph office and a fruit dealer, as [illegible] "egg plant" was one word or two. The [illegible] insisted that it was one word and the clerk in[illegible] making it two, thus "egg plant." The [illegible] is one for which no definite rule can be [illegible], like the subject of one's religious be[illegible] might be argued till the stars fall. Webster [illegible] compound word of it and the lexicogra[illegible] THE OREGONIAN indorse him. If a plant [illegible] it might be called an egg plant. But the [illegible] referred to is not an egg at all but the [illegible] species of solanum and is known as "egg [illegible]". But as there is no way of deciding the mat[illegible] is no use in saying anything more about it.

[illegible] THE HARVEST FIELD.—In regard to the [illegible] number of men who are seen loafing around [illegible] it has been suggested that the reason why [illegible] them do not seek work in the harvest field [illegible] they expect to get employment on the river [illegible] improvements. If this is the case many are doomed [illegible] disappointed, for THE OREGONIAN is reliably in[illegible] that less than a hundred men will be em[illegible] this work and they will not be unskilled [illegible] of the loafer class. So persons who want [illegible] employment will do well to strike out for where [illegible] golden fields of waving grain [illegible] The autumn sun shines clearly.

[illegible] OF MILK.—A gentleman who returned from [illegible] beach yesterday states that quite a number [illegible] are stopping at the Seaside house [illegible] are new arrivals daily. The hotel under [illegible] management of Mr. Charles Cole is giving [illegible] satisfaction, the general verdict being that it [illegible] as well conducted before. The dairy [illegible] with the hotel is stocked with [illegible] which [illegible] gallons [illegible] of milk morning and evening and the children of [illegible] are allowed to swim in lacteal fluid if they [illegible]. The Nekanikum furnishes fine sport for both [illegible] and sea bathing is daily indulged in by [illegible] guests.

SOJOURNERS AT WILHOIT.—Among the campers at [illegible] Springs during the past week were Judge [illegible] and family of Portland, Mr. Butler and family [illegible] Independence, Mr. Frank Owens of East Port[illegible], Wm. Barlow and family of Barlow's, Mr. [illegible] Miller and family, [illegible] Oregon City, Mrs. [illegible] Ray and family of Ray's Landing, Mr. N. O. [illegible] and Col. W. L. White and family. The [illegible] there now is delightful and all are enjoy[illegible] themselves to their heart's content.

[illegible] PASSENGERS.—Passed Heron yesterday [illegible] here to-day: James A. Brent, Thos. Brent, [illegible] Devitt and family, J. S. Curtis and wife, H. J. [illegible], W. J. Conklin, D. Scull, Jr., W. E. Scull, [illegible] Geary and daughter, H. W. Scott, S. H. [illegible], C. W. Hackett and family, R. Dement, T. E. [illegible] Tutt and two children, Miss Tutt, T. A. [illegible]

[illegible] AT CITY VIEW.—Pools on the match race [illegible] Ocean and Susie at City View park to[illegible] last evening, $20 to $20, about $900 finding [illegible] into the pool box. Boats for the races leave [illegible] of Taylor street at 1, 2 and 3 o'clock this [illegible]

[illegible] MATCH.—A game will be played this af[illegible] at the Oaks between the eleven chosen to [illegible] with Victoria and a team chosen [illegible] been selected at 2 o'clock sharp [illegible]

RIVER IMPROVEMENT COMMENCED.—The work of deepening the channel at St. Helens bar is to be commenced at once. Captain Powell of the United States engineers has made arrangements with the Oregon Improvement company for the use of the steamship Walla Walla for that purpose. This being a work of public benefit the company furnishes the boat on very reasonable terms and all are most zealous to assist by every means in their power. Messrs. Ainsworth & [illegible] very kindly furnish cables and anchors for the work, and the captain of the Mt. Washington also furnishes a barge or boat. The Walla Walla left last evening for St Helens. The powerful government boat in use at the Cascades will act as tender to her instead of the snag boat which was employed last year. Captain Powell has [illegible] charge of the work and can, if he deems necessary, have the Walla Walla for thirty days. The [illegible] will probably be conducted in the same manner which proved so successful last year and the year before. It [illegible] that there may be time after the completion [illegible] at St Helens bar to do something at Walker's [illegible] and bar as there has been [illegible] reports that point every year. There can be no doubt that the [illegible] that place being as easy [illegible] at St Helens though [illegible] has never been set at work here. The immense grain crop now being harvested in this section will require a large number of ships to [illegible] of obstructions to navigation is a more important matter this season than ever. It [illegible] the successful car[illegible] present management [illegible]

TILLAMOOK FIRE [illegible]. [illegible] in the vacant [illegible] streets was out at a very [illegible] is fully [illegible] special [illegible] well [illegible] that just [illegible] threw out [illegible] an intense [illegible] would have [illegible] A man [illegible] the ceiling [illegible] I was then [illegible] Mr. [illegible] and a [illegible] the rest of this in [illegible]

EMBEZZLEMENT NEEDED.—The house of Frank Friesbee, exchange teller at the First National bank, was visited by burglars about 1 o'clock this morning. Mr. Friesbee and family are absent in Montana, and whether the thieves succeeded in obtaining any booty or not is not yet known. The house is located on Montgomery street between Ninth and Tenth streets.—Telegram. Mr. Friesbee was granted a leave of absence from the bank and left with his family last Saturday for San Francisco. Since his departure a discrepancy amounting to some $5100 has been found in the books of the bank which no one except himself can explain. It is probable that he can explain the matter if he can be found, but whether his explanation will prove satisfactory or not remains to be seen. At present appearances are decidedly against him. It is quite probable that the object of the burglars above mentioned was merely to form an opinion by the appearance of things at Friesbee's residence as to whether when he left he had an intention of returning or not.

WAIVED EXAMINATION.—The three counterfeiters captured by the police were arrested by U. S. Marshal Kelly yesterday on warrants issued by U. S. District Attorney Watson. They waived examination before U. S. Commissioner Paul R. Deady and were held to answer in $1000 each. One hails from Montana, one from Wisconsin, and the other from Michigan. They are rather a rough looking lot. They ask how long it would be before they could be sentenced if they pleaded guilty, from which it is inferred that they do not intend to stand a trial. It will not take them so long to get sentenced as it will to serve out the time they will get.

COTTIER WINS HIS SUIT.—The case of Cottier and other against Simpson and others in the United States circuit court was yesterday decided in favor of the plaintiff. There are quite a number of buildings [illegible] which the [illegible] has been introduced without the permission or knowledge of Mr. Cottier, the owner of the patent. This case was a test case and the court found damages to the extent of $35 with leave to move for judgment for a greater sum.

MARSHAL KELLY'S FORCE.—United States Marshal Kelly entered upon the duties of his office yesterday. Ward S. Stevens retains his position as office deputy and clerk, which he has filled satisfactorily for the past fourteen years. Charles W. Brust resigns as process deputy. The bailiffs are G. G. Smith, F. B. Brust and J. H. Butler. Mr. Grady of East Portland takes the position of janitor of the United States courts.

THE DINGLEY SHIPPING BILL.

To insure the better execution of the Dingley bill the acting secretary of the treasury has issued instructions to custom officers to enforce the provisions of section 3 of the passenger act of 188[illegible] prohibiting unauthorized persons going on board incoming vessels. The [illegible] quoted from section 9: Sec. [illegible] That it shall not be lawful for the master of any such steamship or other vessel, not in distress, after the arrival of the vessel within any collection district of the United States, to allow any person or persons except a pilot, officer of the customs or health officer, agents of the vessel and consignees, to come on board the vessel or to leave the vessel until the vessel has been taken in charge by an officer of the customs, nor after charge so taken, without leave of such officer, until all the passengers with their baggage have been duly landed from the vessel. [illegible] The penalty for a violation of this provision is a fine not exceeding $1000. Customs officers are instructed that under the provisions [illegible] runner for a sailors' boarding house or hotel, no runner ther for nor any other person interested therein or connected therewith is to be allowed to board incoming vessels until after they reach their docks and all passengers and baggage shall have been discharged.

CHEHALIS NOTES

CHEHALIS, W. T., July 3[illegible]

Crops never looked better here than now and the acreage of grain is larger than ever before.

The hay crop has been but slightly damaged by the late rains. This section has always been fortunate enough not to have a crop. Hay readily sells now at from $6 to $9 per ton in the fields.

C. W. Prindle and family, well known in Portland, are now residents of Chehalis. Mr. Prindle having purchased a half interest in a store here.

Five dwellings, two churches, a jail, a store and bank are now in course of erection here and carpenters are pushing the work on them.

Lewis county claims the oldest printer on the coast in the person of E. M. Gelper. He learned his trade about fifty-five years ago and helped to get out the first number of THE OREGONIAN.

A wool shed belonging to the O. & C. R. R. Co. and located at the depot caught fire yesterday forenoon from the sparks of a passing locomotive. The three fire companies belonging to the department of the city at once responded to the alarm and but little difficulty was experienced in extinguishing the flames. Tiger Engine Company No. 2 secured water about thirty seconds in advance of Capital's hand engine. Alert Hook and Ladder Company were on hand and rendered prompt assistance. Loss nominal.

H. W. Cole, who represents the U. S. Fibre Lighting Company, was in the city on Thursday visiting, the advantages offered for introducing a plant of their machinery here. He visited the penitentiary, the asylum, the state house and other public buildings and was very favorably impressed with the outlook. Ample water power can be secured at the prison to run the necessary machinery, thus saving the cost of an engine. Should he receive sufficient encouragement he will at an early day commence the introduction of this system of electric light.

NEWPORT NOTES

NEWPORT, Aug 1, 1884

Since the rain [illegible] we are having [illegible] ful weather [illegible] the people are enjoying it to the fullest extent. The hotels are filled to their utmost capacity and [illegible] To lay there for over [illegible] men convey [illegible] and parties looking for business investments. All appear delighted with the prospects of Yaquina bay.

The government inspector of customs is here looking after business and notices great improvements on the bay since his last visit.

Wells Fargo & Co. have established an agency here with James Brassfield as agent. It is doing a thriving business and is a great convenience for the people.

The roads are much improved since the [illegible] settled. The Oregon Pacific Railroad Company has a gang of Chinamen repairing them.

A great number of campers are [illegible] the bay this year. They are principally encamped on the south side and are all loud in their praise of this natural summer resort. [illegible] and beach to drive upon and as smooth as a floor. Sea bathing and fishing are also very fine.

The government harbor [illegible] will be more lively.

RAILROAD MATTERS

There has been in the last few days a [illegible] through ticket from Portland taken up here. They are sold by the O. & C. R. R. Co. for $9.85. This is a great convenience to travelers as it secures seats on the stage line without fail.

The O. P. R. R. is progressing. [illegible] all expectation and it is now generally conceded that it will be [illegible] to Corvallis by the 15th of October. The right of way gang have only fifteen miles to clear and the track will be finished [illegible] thirty miles to complete [illegible] is rapid work. The long trestle at [illegible] is finished and the [illegible] awaiting the tracklayers. All the tunnels are finished and ready for track. To-day they moved five camps of graders above [illegible]. Grading will be finished to that point of [illegible] in three more days. In fact as the road progresses the people have more confidence and real estate is steadily becoming more active and increasing in value. Several large transactions have been made in the last week. Improvements are being made with an earnestness never before seen. There is also a confidence of stability everywhere seen that has never existed here before, and a desire to secure a foothold before a boom commences.

ALBANY NOTES.

ALBANY, Aug 1

Eight steam threshers will be in operation in Linn county this season.

G. H. Baber of Washington county has been in the city several days past.

Quite a number of our citizens are taking up claims in the new mines.

Miss Lola Lair of Eugene city is in the city a guest of Miss [illegible]

Miss Estella Patterson of Salem has been in the city several days past a guest of [illegible]

Mr. George Simons, who has been seriously ill for some time past, is again able to be upon the streets.

Mr. Clay Marshall and wife have returned from eastern Oregon and will now permanently remain in Albany.

There is a splendid opening in Albany for another physician to settle. There are now in the city fourteen regular practicing physicians.

Misses Minnie and Mattie Allen, [illegible] James Foster, J[illegible] and Oscar Blount started to the Bay yesterday for a week's recreation.

Mr. H. L. [illegible] foreman of Linn engine company No. 2, in helping put the engine at the fire the other evening had the side of one of his feet run over, mashing it quite severely.

Mr. Fred Will[illegible], an old and esteemed resident of Albany, died at his residence on Second street last night of consumption. He will be buried to-morrow at 3 P. M. by the Odd Fellows of which order he was an honored member.

Chief Engineer Hoffman and Assistant Chief W. R. Blain returned from Portland yesterday, where they have been several days in the interest of the firemen's tournament. They will go to Eugene City in a few days for a like purpose.

Everything possible is being done to make the coming firemen's tournament a complete success in every particular. Over $900 in cash prizes will be given away and already thirteen different companies have entered for the contests with several more expected. The Albany boys will leave no stone unturned to give a grand reception to all visiting firemen.

Willie, 8 year old son of C. H. Stewart, had an almost miraculous escape from drowning last Tuesday afternoon. In company with several small children he was playing on the ditch bank and accidentally fell in the water, being about three or four feet in depth and the current quite strong. No help was near but the little fellow struggled manfully and after being washed about seventy five yards managed to catch the bank on which he crawled just as a passerby noticed him. He was taken home and though thoroughly chilled was otherwise uninjured.

A Pleasant Little Woman Who is Anxious to Find Out About the Divorce Laws

This place holds all the law and I am in need of one. [illegible] a pleasant faced brunette woman of about 35 years of age as she approached Justice White at the Tombs yesterday.

"Have I had your husband locked up?" queried the judge.

"I might have."

"How long has he been missing?"

"Seven long dreary years. My name is Ann [illegible]del, and I live at No. 179 Allen street. My husband Otto deserted me seven years ago and a note he left behind informed me that he had made his departure for Europe. Two months later, however, I heard he was stopping in Union Hill, Jersey City. I made inquiries there and learned that he had been stopping at that place but he had left a week before. I have not heard from him since. Now I am very anxious to know if he is among the dead or living."

"For what reason?"

"Oh," she answered blushing, "I don't want to be husbandless always."

"Whom do you want to make happy?" said the court smiling.

"A boarder named Prince Molobiels who lives in the same house. He loves me and I love him. Why should we wait longer? The marriage day has been set twice, but each time near its approach it was put off by me. I felt a little shaky. I feared for his return, and then I would be arrested for bigamy."

"The best thing you can do is to advertise in newspapers for information regarding your husband and keep a copy of the paper in case of necessity. If your should remarry and he should turn up and have you arrested you would have evidence to acquit you."

"I'll do that," said the woman.

"There is another and better plan," said the judge. "Abandonment for six years entitles the sufferer to a divorce. Employ a good lawyer and he will clear the path so that you can wed again in a few weeks."

"I will do that also."

"How much does your lover earn a week?"

"Eighteen dollars. He is a cotton weaver."

"I wish you more luck with him than you had with your first. Good bye."

"Good bye," said as she skipped out of court as lively as a young girl.

To Measure the Hight of a Tree

Youth's Companion

There is a very simple way of measuring the hight of a tree when it can be reached by any one on a sunny day or in bright moonlight. All the apparatus that is necessary is a small stick of any length. Draw a circle with a radius (half the diameter) of a little less than the length of the stick. This will be done by holding one end of the stick any two inches from the end and moving the other end around, making the circle with a knife or a chip. Then place the stick in the ground exactly in the center of the circle perfectly upright and press it down until the hight of the stick is exactly the same as the radius of the circle. When the end of the shadow of the stick exactly touches the circle then also the shadow of the tree will be exactly in length the same measurement as its height. Of course to find a case the sun will be at an exact angle of 45 degrees. Measurements of this character can be best tested in the summer when the sun is powerful and has reached to a good height in the heavens and when the trees are clothed with living green so as to cast a dense shadow. To many to whom this idea may not have occurred it might be made annually a matter of interest this on warm summer days to take the height of prominent trees and so compare growth from year to year.

WHY IS IT SO

Some find work where some find rest
And so the weary world goes on
I sometimes wonder which is best
The answer comes when life is gone

Some eyes sleep when some eyes wake
And so the dreary night hours go
Some hearts beat where some hearts break
I often wonder why this so

Some wills faint where some wills fight
[illegible] where other hands
[illegible] and through lands
Move [illegible] of life

Some feet halt while some feet tread
In tireless march a thorny way
Some struggle on where some have fled
Some seek where there shun the fray

Some sleep on while others keep
The vigils of the true and brave
They will not rest till roses creep
Around their names above the grave

GREAT CLEARANCE SALE
—OF—
Furnishing Goods,
HATS, CAPS, ETC.

THE FIFTH WEEK HAS COMMENCED

The public has taken advantage of our great clearance sale far beyond our expectations. This proves that we have superior goods, at lower prices, than any other house in town. The clothing buyers of the state of Oregon have already recognized that fact; there is no better class of goods anywhere, nor at any closer figures, than those sold by KOHN & STEINBACH. And yet one visit will convince all that our prices range from 25 to 40 per cent. lower than can be found at any other clothing house in the city.

We invite one and all to call at our place,

COR. FIRST AND MORRISON,

and see for themselves.

A JERSEY CENTENARIAN

Michael Potter's Posterity Celebrate his One Hundredth Birthday

Philadelphia Record July 30

The [illegible] of Willow Grove which stands at the headwaters of the Maurice river in Cumberland county, N. J., was yesterday the scene of a novel and extraordinary gathering. The descendants of Michael Potter—six generations of them—celebrated in a public fashion the centennial of that cheery old gentleman. The day the venerable patriarch passed the ninety-ninth milestone th[illegible] but he simply reserved [illegible] for the event of yesterday. Besides the numerous Potters [illegible] residents of the three counties that form the Cross [illegible] Atlantic and Cumberland were on hand. So were a brass band, the ubiquitous peanut man, the lemonade chap and an enterprising [illegible] who endangered his [illegible] to obtain a correct picture and autograph of Michael Potter. Only twenty-five minutes [illegible] was held in the grove by the [illegible] church. Beneath the generous shade long tables for dinner were spread for the Potters. At the side of the church, of which the [illegible] has been [illegible] for sixty odd years, raised seats were erected, from which the Potters, to the number of 200 by blood and marriage, were photographed in a group. In sight of the grove was the house in which Michael has lived for nearly seventy-five years, and which at the beginning [illegible] in [illegible] years of the [illegible] The house in which he was born and [illegible] in a [illegible] neighborhood has gone to decay years ago.

Mr. Potter is bent with age. Up to two years ago he could read a newspaper. He is hearing [illegible] and he possesses all his other faculties. There is nothing childish about him. He knows by name nearly the whole long train of Potters. He walks with the assistance of two canes, but ordinarily is wheeled about in an invalid's chair. He sat yesterday in state perched upon a dry goods box, where he was at all times hemmed in by a curious crowd. Hundreds of his acquaintances shook hands with him.

"Eighty years ago," said the patriarch, "I used to build rafts on the mill pond over there and float them down the Maurice river to Millville, where they were sold to ship builders. You can't float them down from here now because the river has dwindled down to a mere brook. Yes, I have used tobacco but gave it up long ago, and a good many years ago, too, I used to take a pull on the whiskey jug in the harvest field. I weigh 134 pounds and that has been my weight for the last fifty years, I believe. Many are the deer I have shot around here [illegible] young man. My father came from Pennsylvania and was a German. Pennsylvania Dutch men they call them now. He settled here. His name was Henry Ottenbaker and he was a potter by trade. He was very proud of his German origin and compelled his children to speak that language. If he caught us using English he would punish us. The folks around here didn't take kindly to our name and in the course of years dropped it and called us Potter after my father's occupation. When he died the boys decided to adopt the name and against my protest it was made legal by legislative enactment. I am the father of eleven children, five of whom are dead. I was married for fifty years. My wife, who died in 1863 in her 70th year, lies in that graveyard. I have voted at every presidential election since Madison's time and I expect to vote for Cleveland and Hendricks next November. The only time I have scratched the democratic ticket was when I voted for John T. Nixon, republican, for congress, but I guess the good Lord has forgiven me that sin. I have never taken a dose of medicine in my life and have had occasion for a doctor but once, and then to sew up a cut."

Mr. Potter's oldest grandchild, [illegible] Hawn, born in 1821, is still living. The oldest great grandchild is Lavina [illegible], born in 1847, and the oldest great great grandchild is Cora A. Nye, born in 1876. There are 135 direct descendants of Michael Potter. The [illegible] was [illegible] of interesting reminiscences [illegible] and [illegible] real hope upon attending the Woodstown fair this fall. There were 400 wagons [illegible] grounds yesterday [illegible] Methodist preachers. A service was held in the church at which the Rev. Dr. Charles Wills [illegible] sketch of the leading historical events that occurred in the centenarian's lifetime. There was great interest taken in Bartholomew Coles of Harmony, who was 93 years old on July 4 and who was present. Mr. Coles is hale and hearty, standing [illegible] and [illegible] better than Michael Potter.

Thomas M[illegible], the man accused of attempting to rob Dr. Daugherty Monday evening at Walla Walla, and who was arrested [illegible] the latter, was tried and bound over in the sum of $250 for appearance before the district court. Being unable to furnish the bond he was sent to jail.

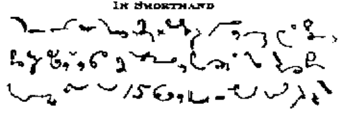
IN SHORTHAND | IN LONGHAND



W. O. Crilly, Portland, Or. Dear Sir: In response to your request, I can say that I cheerfully subscribe to the statement that under your instructions I as well as others in the same class, fully mastered the principles of Ben Pitman's System of Phonetic Shorthand writing in fifteen lessons, establishing a good and sufficient foundation upon which to build by practice and study the thorough acquirement of the art of Phonetic reporting. Yours, etc., W. H. LEEDS

Instructions will commence during the term at 7:30 P. M. and close at 9 P. M. on Monday and Thursday of each week. Terms: Six months' course $20; one half in advance, the balance at the commencement of the second month. W. O. CRILLY, Principal.
